THE COMMONWEALTH. FRANKFORT.

MONDAY, AUGUST 17, 1863.

The New York Riots

It is intimated that there are many indications of an intended renewal, by rioters, of the recent acts of mob law, in the city of New York, in case the draft should be enforced. It is said that the mischievous element is busily engaged forming opposition to the draft, and that, unless the Government is prompt to take measures for the enforcement of the law, it is feared by many that the most serious riots are yet to be recorded.

The Government having taken a position in regard to this matter, it would be a shame and a disgrace to, not only, the nation, but to all who are invested with authority, if a lawless and bloodthirsty mob is permitted to have its way, not only in opposition to law and constituted authority, but in the wholesale plunder, burning and murder which has characterized such demonstrations. We are no admirers of the motives which governed the men who originated the conscript law, having always believed it to be unnecessary; but, it having become a law, and having been already enforced in many parts of the nation, we are for its rigid, just and impartial enforcement. Above all, in these times of civil commotion, when the worst influences and the worst men are abroad, to work the ruin of the country, not only by their treason, but by their lawlessness, the Government ought to be doubly vigilant to crush the first manifestation of mobocracy, wherever and whenever they may appear. This tendency to resist law is becoming too common, and, unless checked by a wise, firm and just policy, will prove, in the end, a far more terrible enemy, to Union, to society, to liberty and Government, than the rebellion. It is an enemy to be feared—to be dreaded beyond all other enemies in a free nation. It becomes, in the hands of bad men, an enemy, against which every good citizen, every lover of order, every patriot, should set his face.

If injustice has been practiced, in the enrollment upon the city of New York, let it be speedily rectified by the proper authorities, and when this is done, let the law be rigidly enforced at whatever cost of money and blood. Let law be upheld at all hazards, and let no mob be led to believe that it can, with impunity, set at defiance the Government and its authority.

Northern Conservatives.

Kentucky is looking with intense interest to the result of the action of Northern Conservatives. She cannot, and will not, affiliate with Abolitionists, but she will affiliate, in the Presidential campaign of 1864, with all true men, of every party, who are in favor of reforming the policy upon which the war is being waged, and prosecuting the war upon the simple basis of restoring the authority of the Constitution and the laws, throughout the revolted States, without revolutionizing the institutions of those States. Upon this platform, the sound men of the loyal States can sweep every thing before them, and crush, utterly, all traces of that radicalism which has produced divisions where, otherwise, perfect unanimity should exist. We hope, therefore, that the coming elections will result in arraying all the true men of the country under one banner, regardless of past differences, and, when the Presidential election comes off, the last vestige of Southern and Northern radicalism can be buried so deep that the hand of political resurrection can never reach it.

The Cincinnati Enquirer is quite unhappy over the defeat of Charles A. Wickliffe. This paper is doing, and has heretofore done, a good deal of mischief in Kentucky, as its organs. It is taken quite extensively by them. If one would take the trouble to follow the newsboys through Louisville, Frankfort, Lexington, and other places in Kentucky, he would find that very few Enquirers get into the hands of genuine Union men. That delectable sheet spoke of Charles A. Wickliffe as the Democratic candidate for Governor of Kentucky, and the party which sustained him as the Democratic party, notwithstanding the Enquirer knew that Wickliffe advocated the "no-more-men-and-money" party doctrine, and in that position had the sympathy of all our Kentucky rebels. There is but one good thing about the Enquirer and that is its opposition to the radicalism of the Abolition party. Out side of that, it is a sheet published in the interest of the Secessionists. It is a fit organ for Cataline Vallandigham, but it does not reflect the wishes and views of the Democratic masses of the free States who stand with the Union men of Kentucky in opposition to Southern and Northern radicalism, but in favor of men and money to sustain our gallant army. The Enquirer should be repudiated by the War Democracy of Ohio. Its effort to ally the War Democracy of the North with the rebels of Kentucky should be denounced by all loyal men.

Maj. Gen. Burnside arrived in Lexington, several days ago. The Observer says he was serenaded one evening, and when the music ceased, in response to loud calls for him, the General appeared, and on being introduced by Colonel Worley, three lusty cheers greeted him, with a proposal from some one in the crowd to give him a hundred more. He thanked the people for their kind demonstration toward him—said he was no speaker, and those who had come to hear him with the expectancy of being interested, would, perhaps, go away disappointed. But, notwithstanding this declaration, he did succeed in interesting an immense crowd during the short time he spoke. He alluded to the fact that he had been a Breckinridge man in the last great presidential campaign, stating that he was as sincere and honest in that position then—because he deemed it right—as he was in his devotion to the Union now—a cause in which he was enlisted heart and soul. He stated that martial law had been declared in this State preceding the recent election in view of the fact that an invading foe was on its borders, and with a design to give all loyal men a chance to cast their suffrages unmolested. The disloyal had no right to approach the ballot-box, and therefore have no right to complain. He complimented Kentucky in a highly flattering manner, stating that he had found it the most loyal State in his department, and had so reported at Washington. He had found more strictly loyal men here than in Ohio or Indiana, though the latter was his birth place. We shall not, however, attempt to give his speech, though brief, lest we may do him injustice, for we took notes. The most of those who heard him seemed not only pleased with his soldierly appearance but with what he said, and to entertain the fullest confidence in him as a commander.

Since his assumption of the command of the Department of the Ohio, General Burnside has had heavy duties to perform. In the absence of his 9th army corps, Morgan has invaded Kentucky, Indiana, and Ohio—and in his wake has followed the Louisiana chief, Scott—yet under his guidance the Union troops have nobly succeeded. General Burnside is evidently doing his whole duty to the best of his ability, and the people honor him for it.

PAR NOBILE FRATREM—Adjutant General at together in the business of recruiting Thomas and Fred Douglass have been associated negro regiments and renting out Southern plantations. The Commercial says Fred is worth half a dozen General Thomases.

The Cincinnati Commercial classifies the people of the United States into four divisions as follows:

1. The Abolitionists proper, who are for the Union if slavery can be abolished, and not otherwise.
2. The pro-slavery men, who would rather see the war fail to restore the Union, than to see it succeed in the restoration slavery should be extinguished.
3. The Union men proper, who are for the territorial integrity of the Union, first and last, willing to see slavery restored or preserved, as may best maintain the Union; holding, if anti-slavery in sentiment, to the Websterian doctrine, that "Liberty and Union" are, indeed, "one and inseparable now and forever."
4. The fanatical fighters for Southern independence, prepared, in the last resort, to end slavery, in the mad hope of destroying the Union.

The supporters of the Administration, whose energies are directed to the maintenance of the war, as the case stands, comprise the first and third of these divisions.

THE NEXT LEGISLATURE—The Maysville Eagle, urging the claims of Harrison Taylor, Esq., as Speaker of the House of Representatives, says:

The position has never, in the history of Kentucky, been given to any one from this section of the State, which has been entirely overlooked in the distribution of offices. The candidates for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and for all the State offices, were taken from Central, Southern, and Western Kentucky; none from the northeastern part of the State, which has given as large Union majorities and as many soldiers in proportion to population as any other section. Mr. Taylor was solicited by many members of the General Assembly and by influential gentlemen from all parts of the State to become a candidate for Governor, and there is every reason to believe that the position would have been tendered to him had not that negotiation of self which ever characterizes his public conduct caused him to decline the use of his own name in connection with the office, and to warmly advocate the nomination of the gentleman who was selected by the Convention. At Louisville he was placed in nomination for the Lieut. Governorship by his friends, who were very numerous in that body and very zealous in advocating his claims. He immediately arose and withdrew his own name, and placed that of Col. Jacob in nomination, and threw his whole influence in his favor. His reason for this was, that as the candidate for Governor was of Whig antecedents, the second place should be given to a Democrat whose devotion to his country had been proved in the day of trial. One of the Editors of the Journal standing by us at the time, remarked: "Taylor always does everything gracefully."

But we would be doing him injustice were to give only these reasons for urging his election to the position we have named. He has served two terms in the House of Representatives, this being the third, and one term of four years in the Senate. He was a Senator during the winter of 1860-61, so full of peril to Kentucky, his strong sense and ready discernment frequently being of great influence in preventing the State from drifting into the rebellion. During the frequent sessions of the last General Assembly, he was recognized as one of the most able, useful, industrious, and patriotic members of the House of Representatives, and, if the decision was left to the old members, his election would be assured. Of unswerving Unionism, he has never gone into radical extremes. His evenness of temper, strong good sense, quick decision, unbending firmness and yet kindly conciliation, and his inflexible justice all admirably qualify him for a presiding officer. With no desire of disparaging others, we say that no one who has been elected would fill the place with greater satisfaction to the House, with more of dignity, and with more credit to himself and his immediate constituents than Harrison Taylor.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.—On Sunday, about one o'clock P. M., during a light shower, John Hamilton, company K, Seventh Kentucky cavalry, was struck by lightning while on picket duty near Nashville, on the Hardin pike, and killed instantly. Two soldiers, who were on duty with him, were prostrated, and remained senseless half an hour.

OBITUARY.

On the 31st instant, Mrs. MARTHA A. wife of Col. L. A. Berry, Woodford county, died at the 64th year of her age. Her illness was caused by dropsy of the chest, which for several months she bore with Christian fortitude and resignation. In her death the community, as well as her bereaved family, has sustained an irreparable loss. A consistent and true Christian, she was devoted to her profession, she filled every sphere of duty and usefulness with unfaltering fidelity. Association with her was a sure bond of sympathy, and all, of every age and condition, yielded her their full measure of affection and respect. Truly, to know her was to love her. Her kind and generous heart, and unselfish consideration of others were the magnetic ties that bound all hearts to hers. Indeed, all womanly virtues seemed to combine to form one of earth's rarest, brightest jewels; all Christian virtues to make her one of the purest ornaments of her church. All all which were united in the sphere of her influence will realize a personal affliction in her death. If friends feel that, who can estimate the grief of those who have always experienced her tenderest interest and watchful care? Oh that we all may emulate her excellent virtues, as we appreciate her noble and irreproachable character!

Alas! she has gone—her heart, cold and still, will beat no again with pure loving thrill.

We sigh that she's gone, but angels rejoice,

For Heaven has heard the glad sound of her voice.

AUG. 6, 1863.

[From the National Intelligencer.]

Died, at Beech Home, near Dalton, Georgia, on the 5th of July, 1863, in the seventy-second year of her age, and fifth of her married life, LUCY M. GARRARD, wife of Duff Garrard, and daughter of Benjamin Edwards, of Kentucky; a devout Christian, a devoted wife, a fond and exemplary mother, a sincere friend and kind neighbor, endeared to the poor wherever she went, and especially to the poor of the Fifth Ward, in Washington city, (where she long lived), by the unostentatious charities with which she was ever ready to relieve their distress, and still more by the sympathizing patience with which she listened to their troubles, and encouraged them by her good counsels to bear their hard lot with Christian fortitude.

All who saw her after death exclaimed, "how beautiful!" all who knew her in life, thought of her "how lovely!"

In her last moments, after leaving kind messages of love to all her children, and to many of her friends, by name, with falling breath, and at intervals, as her strength permitted, she said: "Love to all my old friends. I have not an unkind feeling to any one in the world. Bless the Lord! Bless his holy name! You must all try to live near to God. I have one there (in heaven) to lend a helping hand, and one to meet me at the door, my angel child, my sixteen year old sainted child! Pray, pray, all of you; pray without ceasing, pray for me, for He is able even now to raise me up from this bed. He will answer the prayers of those who pray aright. I feel perfectly quiet. Pray for me, and I will be done. I have done all the good I could for myself and others. Yes, I feel willing to go whenever the Lord may call me. Thank the Lord! Praise his name! His grace is all sufficient. Oh my abiding faith is so strong! Bless the Lord! Bless his holy name!" In this happy frame of mind she died, retaining her consciousness unclouded to the last. To such, death is but the entrance to a brighter life.
